

Lenticel colour or perception

Lenticels are small pustules on the stems of many rain forest trees and are composed of material which when rubbed between the fingers has the consistency of borer dust. To see the true colour of lenticels it may be necessary to rub the weathered material off the top of each lenticel to expose the fresher material beneath.

not illustrated

B15 black or dark

Copyright © CSIRO 2020, all rights reserved.

not illustrated

B16 rusty

not illustrated

B17 pale

not illustrated

B18 inconspicuous

Web edition hosted at <https://apps.lucidcentral.org/rainforest>